Remember that your subject librarians are here to help you. Just ask at the Library Desk to speak to a subject librarian and we will do our best to answer your questions.

- If too few or no results are retrieved, you will need to think of alternative keywords to describe your subject. [If this fails try a different database - see a subject librarian for advice].
- From your list of results, click on the title of an article to read a summary of the contents.
- Select records for retrieval by ticking the box to the left of each record, then click on the Email, Print, Save or Export (for example to RefWorks) link at the top of the screen. Choose your retrieval preference from this screen.

Note:

You can cross search DAAI with a range of other databases from the same supplier by clicking on The Arts link on the right of the search page.

If you have any questions about this please see your subject librarian.

To trace the full text of an article

1. If there is an HTML  or PDF  link below your chosen article, click on one of these options for full text. You will find retrieval options within the resulting screens. [HTML gives text only and PDF gives text and images if they were part of the original journal article]

OR

2. Check the Library catalogue for the journal title in question [do a basic title search and remember to change the search option to Journals Catalogue. If the title is in stock, check that the library holdings cover the volume and year you have been referred to in the database record].

OR

3. Click on the electronic journals link on the Library & ICT tab on the Portal and enter the title of the journal to search for an electronic version of the article if it exists within the library system.

OR

4. Click on blue UU Find it button for your record to search for an electronic version of the article if it exists within the library system.

OR

5. If none of these options give you full text, you can order a journal article via the Document Delivery Service. Please see a member of Library staff for more details.
